INTRO SPEECH

Gli adolescenti e i giovani adulti (AYA) diagnosticati con cancro costituiscono un gruppo particolare di pazienti le cui esigenze cliniche e psicologiche differiscono sostanzialmente da quelle dei pazienti pediatrici o degli adulti più anziani. Negli ultimi anni, la comunità scientifica internazionale ha riconosciuto i problemi specifici affrontati dai pazienti AYA. Ci sono diversi modi in cui gli AYA occupano una posizione intermedia tra i mondi dell'oncologia pediatrica e adulta, e né i modelli sanitari pediatrici né quelli adulti si sono rivelati capaci di rispondere alle loro particolari caratteristiche, che spaziano da un'epidemiologia unica (con tumori sia di tipo pediatrico che adulto che si verificano all'interno dello stesso gruppo di età) a una sfera psicologica complessa, da sfide cliniche come la difficoltà nell'accesso a cure specialistiche e sperimentazioni terapeutiche alla necessità di ambienti ospedalieri appropriati per l'età, con strutture e programmi dedicati.

Di fronte a queste sfide, la comunità scientifica dovrebbe adattarsi alle esigenze dei pazienti AYA con cancro coinvolgendo professionisti della salute di diverse discipline, difensori dei diritti dei pazienti e altre parti interessate. Nel 2021, AIOM (Associazione Italiana di Oncologia Medica) ha unito le forze con AIEOP (Associazione Italiana di Oncologia ed Ematologia Pediatrica) per costituire un intergruppo formale AIEOP-AIOM per studiare "dal basso" le varie problematiche legate al trattamento e alla cura degli AYA con cancro. Recentemente, "C'è tempo ODV" ha aggiunto la prospettiva dei pazienti al progetto.

In questo convegno di 2 giorni, saranno discussi diversi aspetti degli AYA con cancro, comprese presentazioni frontali da parte di esperti, ma lasciando anche spazio per ascoltare la voce dei pazienti e per scambiare opinioni e pensieri tra i partecipanti e i relatori. Il congresso è gratuito e può essere seguito in presenza o in collegamento remoto, con traduzione simultanea in inglese. Ogni giornata si concluderà con una tavola rotonda che terminerà con un documento di posizione sul tema.

Grazie alla Fondazione Menarini per aver reso possibile tutto ciò e a voi che avete scelto di partecipare

Adolescents and young adults (AYAs) diagnosed with cancer make up a particular group of patients whose clinical and psychological needs differ substantially from those of pediatric patients or older adult patients. In recent years, the international scientific community has recognized the particular problems faced by AYA patients. There are several ways in which AYAs inhabit a middle ground between the worlds of pediatric and adult oncology, and neither pediatric nor adult healthcare models have proved capable of meeting their particular features which range from a unique epidemiology (with both pediatric-type and adult-type tumors occurring within the same age group) to a complex psychological sphere, from clinical challenges such as difficulty accessing specialized care and treatment trials to the need for age appropriate hospital environments with dedicated facilities and programs.

Faced with these challenges, the scientific community should adapt to the needs of AYA patients with cancer by involving diverse health professionals from different disciplines, patient advocates, and stakeholders. In 2021, AIOM (Associazione Italiana di Oncologia Medica) joined forces with AIEOP (Associazione Italiana di Oncologia ed Ematologia Pediatrica) to set up a formal AIEOP-AIOM intergroup to study "bottom-up" different issues related to the treatment and care of AYA with cancer. Recently, "C'è tempo ODV" added the patients' perspective to the project.

In this 2-days congress, different aspects of AYAs with cancer will be discussed, including frontal presentations by expert but also leaving time to hear the patients' voice and to exchange opinions and thoughts between participants and speakers. The congress is free of charge and can be attended in person or from remote connection, with simultaneous translation in English. Each day will be closed by a round table which will end up with a position paper on the topic.

Thanks to Fondazione Menarini for making this possible and to you that chose to participate!

Enjoy Milan and the congress
